

How do we know it works?

Because.....

children and young people speak for themselves.

deaf babies and their parents are allowed to follow their natural instincts and interact spontaneously together.

deaf toddlers interact naturally with hearing toddlers and take the opportunity to attend their local early years settings deaf children move on into their local schools alongside their hearing peers.

deaf children enjoy being with their hearing peers at brownies; cubs; sports activities; music; cinema and everything that their hearing peers are involved in.

deaf teenagers with their hearing friends choose to go onto college, apprenticeship or university and enjoy the social activities too.

as young adults they follow their dreams into careers, the work place and find their own way in life.

deaf young people make the most of the many opportunities and choices that are available to all young people.

You can find these deaf young people everywhere , but may not realise they are deaf, because they are accessing everything hearing young people do and are having fun.

- You can hear them on our web site
- You can meet them at our Summer Schools
